

Redeemer City to City Curriculum Manager

Redeemer City to City is seeking a Curriculum Manager to contribute to Redeemer City to City's mission of training and resourcing global leaders who cultivate gospel movements. This role will report to the Senior Director of Content Development and work closely with the Global Strategic Services (GSS) team to oversee the development of curriculum for several Redeemer City to City global audiences. Responsibilities include creating and coordinating the creation of engaging curricula and quality resources in collaboration with Global Strategic Services staff, global trainers, and content producers across many cultures. This person should be passionate about adult learning and adapting to how digital technology is reshaping virtual and traditional learning environments.

A successful Curriculum Manager should demonstrate experience in collaboration across cultural contexts, the creation of adult learning products, and an understanding of adult learning best practices. Outstanding candidates should have strong project management abilities and communication skills as well as a strong personal initiative. He or she should also be willing to work unusual hours given the global interfaces. Candidates must be able to work in environments with high ambiguity.

The ideal candidate will have a proven ability to: foster coordination and cooperation among diverse groups often with differing and or ambiguous objectives.

He or she will be committed to: adult learning and persevering in collaboration to complete deliverables. He or she will be energized by a challenging position and a desire to see the gospel spread in large urban areas of the world.

This position is an excellent opportunity to: use his or her gifts to see the power of curriculum as a multiplicative offering in the spread of the gospel in urban areas of the world.

The Curriculum Manager reports to the Senior Director of Content and is responsible for the following:

- Create and/or coordinate the completion of online, in-person, and hybrid curriculum to enable robust learning for key leadership programs
- Develop GSS curriculum systems
- Support global curriculum development with our partners

Qualifications

We are seeking candidates who have a strong desire to see cities be renewed by the Gospel as people come to Christ and Christians impact their communities. The candidate will excel in relationship building, be results-oriented, and have strong project management skills. He or she will most likely have the following:

- Experience with curriculum development and adult learning best practices
- Experience with adult learning technologies and platforms
- A track record of developing and maintaining strong working relationships
- A demonstrated commitment to getting things done
- Strong digital and research skills
- Excellent collaboration skills
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills
- An understanding of stakeholders and experience managing communication with various constituencies
- Great networking and interpersonal abilities
- Ability to synthesize information and concepts from multiple sources

- Strong planning skills, vision, and creative intelligence
- Ability to assign tasks, manage processes, meet deadlines, and offer and incorporate feedback
- Experience working in cross-cultural and or global environments
- A Bachelor's and or Master's degree is preferred but not required if appropriate experience exists

Compensation commensurate with experience.
